

EDITOR WALTON, of the Stanford Interior Journal, says that that Tom Henry is a disgrace to the party that honored him by its votes. We have long wondered how a party that had honored Gov. Blackburn, J. G. Cecil, Ralph Sheldon and Judge Harris with its votes could have slipped up so all-fired hard on Henry. It is particularly to be regretted that an old tried and true democrat like Editor Walton should have gone up to the trough and voted for all of them, with his foresight shut and his hind sight wide open.—[Louisville Commercial.] It so happens that we voted for none of the fine French gentlemen named, except J. G. Cecil and there was nothing against him at the time we did so. We however claim no especial credit for failing to vote for we were not in this section on election day. Our files show that we opposed the nomination of Blackburn and they also show as early as April 1882, that we called on Tom Henry to withdraw from the race for Appellate Clerk and in the event he failed to do so, we asked the constituted authorities to declare his nomination forfeited. After the whitewashing that the committee gave him and his apparently sincere promises to sin no more, we did cast our vote for him, though with misgivings of the ability of an habitual drunkard to entirely abstain from the intoxicating cup. We beg to enter a plea of guilty of being an "old tried and true democrat" but we are no apologist for the short comings of any of our members and never hesitated to express our sentiments more freely against one than against a republican, for his teachings and his affiliations are such as to make him know the honorable bearing that is required of him.

We have had a speaking liking for W. O. Bradley in the past, and have treated him with very patient and generous courtesy. But his remarks Wednesday, before the republican committee at Washington must disgust and mortify every intelligent person in Kentucky. He is reported as saying in substance that the South would furnish republican electors if the republicans there were permitted to vote, and then whined out the falsehood that republicans in the South could give and had given up their lives to the cause of republicanism. This alleged statement coming from a person who lives in the South as Mr. Bradley does, is on its face a very pitiful and dirty falsehood, which should blister the mouth foul enough to utter it deliberately. Any man, whatever his politics, who utters such baseless and wholesale calumnies against his people, really places himself below the recognition of decent men. We truly hope there is some mistake in the report of his remarks.

This newspaper "interview," which has been steadily falling into disrepute of late years, has at length, it may be conjectured, reached the lowest depth. One "Jeans Crow" whose painfully facetious letters from Rockcastle Springs may be recalled by some persons, has interviewed Mr. F. F. Bobbitt and published two columns of the melancholy driven in Wednesday's Courier-Journal. Some parts of it are vile slanders on our good people and others too coarse for even the Police Gazette. Mr. Crow is evidently very young and Mr. Crow is evidently very "fresh," else he could not be so easily imposed upon.

We are glad to observe that General Brown has just introduced a resolution to curtail the size of the Congressional Record by preventing the insertion of speeches not actually delivered, unless they bear directly upon a topic immediately under discussion. If it should pass the day of the small member is past, for he can no more gulf his constituents with "copies of my speech," which were not only never delivered, but written by somebody else.

The National Republican Committee has fixed Chicago as the place and June 3d, 1884 as the day for putting out a Presidential candidate to be beaten by a democratic tariff reformer in the following November. The representation will be, for each State five delegates-at-large, for each Congressional district two delegates, and for each Representative at-large two delegates.

Billy Bradley has been interviewed by the Cincinnati Post as to his idea of how the next campaign shall be conducted, and he unhesitatingly unburdened himself that it must be a solid North against a solid South, with the bloody shirt worked for all it is worth. Mr. Bradley should go to.

Representative Willis wants a branch mint established at Louisville and has presented a bill to that effect. If it will make money any more plentiful in these parts, we hereby instruct our member to vote for making it a law.

Joe Blackburn has got in his bill again to erect a $125,000 public building at Lexington and will perhaps get it through since Proctor Knott is not there to show that it is not at all necessary.

Senator Anthony, of Vermont, who has just entered upon his fifth term in the Senate, has been elected President pro tem. He is in very bad health and not likely to hold the place long.

Our esteemed neighbor, the Richmond Herald, has enlarged to a nine column sheet, an evidence that it is prospering according to its deserts. Bro. Newlon has evidently "struck it rich."

Jefferson Davis is at last to enjoy the sequel of Mrs. Dorsey, the Supreme Court having decided that the old lady had a right to will her property to whomsoever she wanted.

Would it not be well for the Legislature to investigate why the care of 131 deaf mutes should cost the State $67,011; over $500 each? There is a screw very loose somewhere. The amount should not be half what it is.

The house will be erected near the Baptist church just back of Mr. Butner's residence. The people of this little town are an enterprising people and when they begin anything they mean business and always make a success.

—Moore, Rosser and Dickey, contractors on the K. C., Extension, began their work three months after another contractor, who had lighter work, and finished about two weeks before him. The work was superintended by Mr. J. A. Dickey in person. The heaviest work, longest tunnels and largest cuts on the line were embraced in this work. Part of the tunnel had to be timbered before it could be finished, and this took a good deal of time. The best of order and discipline was maintained. No whisky was sold on the works and not a single man was killed by violence. We make this statement in justice to Mr. Dickey.

—J. K. Polk arrived last evening in custody of the sheriff of Mercer county. He went to Harrodsburg last Saturday and surrendered himself to the County Judge of that county, who ordered Mr. D. N. Bissett, the sheriff, to deliver him to the Judge of this county. Mr. Polk was turned over to the Judge this (Thursday) morning, and his trial is set for Saturday, 15th inst. Mr. Polk is accompanied by his wife and several of his friends. He will be represented by Col. Sam. Burdett, of Lancaster, W. L. Brown of London, Ky., and J. W. Brown, of this place. —Ed. Slavin, son of Mr. Ben Slavin, of this place, shot and killed a negro at Fort Worth, Texas, a few days ago. According to the statements in the Texas papers he was perfectly justifiable although it was an unfortunate affair. His father seems to regret it very much.

—Three young men just from Hoovers land, arrived here Tuesday evening. They seemed to have a supply of "corn oil" aboard from the way they were flourishing their pistols around and yelling. We fail to learn their names, but no doubt the U. S. authorities will take them in tow when they learn that our mail carrier, Billy Green, had to go a round-about way to get to the post-office. Billy was not afraid of them hurting him, but he was afraid they would shoot a hole in the mail bag.

—As Mr. Billy Wearen, Sr., J. B. Wilson and Leslie Jenkins were coming home from Lancaster and just as they had reached town, the horse got scared, ran off the side of the pike, upset the wagon and threw Mr. Wearen and Mr. Wilson a double somersault over a six-foot stone fence. Uncle Billy says he can turn a somersault as well as any body, but he alights with the wrong end down. He had his head cut in several places but not seriously. Wilson had one of his hands hurt, but Jenkins concluded the fence was most too high and hung on the wagon and came out without a scratch.

GEO. O. BARNES in SCOTLAND

"PRAISE THE LORD"

PETERHEAD, SCOTLAND, NOVEMBER 20, 1883.

Dear Interior:

The first day the girls and I took a stroll on the beach. A heavy-set man with a kindly-featured face volunteered to escort us around and show us what he could. So we made the rounds with him—his explanations proving just what we wanted in the unfamiliar place. As we were coming up the hatchway of a whaler, aboard which he had taken us, that we might know how "blubber" I attempted to give him the usual "tip" of a shilling for his trouble. Joy of joy!—here was one man who vigorously rejected the proffered gift of wages, or "complimentary," or whatever one is pleased to call it. "No, no, sir; I ken weel who ye are; I wanna tak yer siller; but I'll gie mair than that for yer meetin'; na, na, sir; ye gie me to offer sich; put back in yer pocket sir! Na, na, na, sir!" I apologized humbly, but the dear man was evidently hurt. I shall be careful how I treat these men in blue Guernseys as if they were cabmen or waiters or railway employees. But my astonishment was genuine. I remember how a most respected verger in a cathedral, when I offered him a shilling, had said, as he took it up, "There's na such neid, sir!"—but he took it all the same. And I recalled how on another occasion, when I offered a similar gratuity to a person in still higher position, he said, with a bow, "Ye're over kind, sir"—but he took the shilling also, without a murmur. And so at last I had gotten into the notion that the "almighty shilling" was only another way of spelling the "almighty dollar," until here a plain fisherman of Peterhead rebuked my ignorance in this emphatic way. I think I see why the LORD took "fisher folk" for the bulk of the "Apostolic College." Only one "publican" among them to show that all had a chance; but the most of them plain, but honest fishermen. This bluff, kind-hearted guide of our first day's stroll, might have sat for the portrait of "Simon Peter;" he reminded me so of him at every turn. He took us to his cottage facing the bay and the light-house, where, lying in his "bunk" (for the beds were just horizontal niches in the thick wall), he could see the light of one from the front window and hear the dash of the waves on the rocks of the other, to his heart's content. "Some don't like it," he said, "if they haven't a ear for it, sir; but I like the roar of the ocean, for I've heard it all my life, sir; aye, it's music to me." His wife was in trouble from having swallowed a pin a few days before our visit. It had stuck in her throat a good while before going down and the good woman was a little nervous over possible consequences. We exhorted her to trust in the LORD and left her more cheerful than when we came in.

The next day, on our second stroll, another good soul—a second edition of our Simon Peter—who might have been "Andrew, his brother," chaperoned us over another route, explaining everything in the kindest way and evidently desirous to do the honors of the place to strangers. He too was a good christian man and not ashamed of his Master. Indeed, we have noticed as very characteristic of these good hearts, how hold they are in "showing their colors" for Jesus. No shyness in talking about Him, but boldness and pleasure.

On our second stroll we went quite out on the sharp tongue point, scrambling over the jagged rocks, the tide being out, and watching the glorious breakers dashing all along the coast line. The day was fine and the fish boats were at work in the offing, plying their vocation. We visited the oil works where the raw blubber brought by the whalers is "rendered," which, being at work on the cargo of the "Eclipse," above mentioned as the vessel we boarded, was so exceedingly odoriferous that the girls beat a horrified and hasty retreat, when they came within range of the stench. This amused the rough, red-bearded Scotchman, who was "stirring-off" a great vat of the refuse and he pleasantly remarked as they ran off with their handkerchiefs stuffed in their nostrils, "It smells nice, don't it missus?" This refuse blubber, after all the oil is extracted, is sold to the farmers as a highly-valued manure, enriching land most wondrously. The whole interior of a whaler is composed of great tanks made of boiler-iron, some square, some with rounding sides, exactly fitting the vessel's shape, holding from 3 to 5 tons each and with a single month about 2½ feet in diameter, or large enough to admit a man. Into these tanks the whale fat, or blubber, is put, chopped up into bits the size of one's hand or less. Much of the oil seeps out of the little chunks, so that when it is lifted, as we saw them doing the other day, the liquid and solid mixed are dipped up in an iron bucket and transferred to great casks by pouring into a very wide-mouthed funnel, which are then carted off to the rendering and refining-house. The oil is now chiefly used for machinery. The captain of the Eclipse, I was told by our good Simon Peter, has made more money by simple labor than any man in Scotland; for he still goes on his voyages and works as hard as any of his men, though now very wealthy.

The herring fishery, though, which lasts only 8 weeks in July and August, is the chief business of the place. The packers and exporters to the Continent take the "crop" and engage all the large herring boats at stipulated rates. A fishing boat for herring is usually 48 feet long, very broad in the beam, for steadiness and capacity's sake, and about 25 tons burden. The owner of a boat, which costs from $1,200 to $1,500, complete, exclusive of nets, gets from the packer as a bounty £50, be the season good or bad. Then they get £1 "the cran" for all they catch. A cran is a measure holding four baskets 18x22 inches diameter and 2 or 2½ feet deep. Andrew told me yesterday in half-confidence that there was a controversy going on upon the cran question, because the packers insisted upon 4 baskets and the fishermen think 3½ are enough. I suppose that somewhere midway between these two contestants, as between all others lies the blessed truth. O for eyes to see and hearts to act upon this in all our miserable controversies in business and religion. What a world it will be when the "middle route" is travelled by all. The Millennium is the name of that period. Would that its dawn were near.

The meetings get on nicely. The LORD gives us favor with the people and increasing power in speaking and singing. Continue to pray for us. Ever in Jesus, GEO. O. BARNES.

—License for the marriage of Mr. J. H. Leslie and Miss Mollie E. Adams was issued by the county clerk on Wednesday.

—The coal known as the Pittman coal is now mostly sold by the dealers here; 15 cts is the price per bushel in quantities less than 100 bushels.

—Mr. A. P. Wilson, the new proprietor of the Central House, has workmen engaged in converting a part of the old dining-room and a part of the office into a store-room. It is his intention when the room is completed to open a fine stock of family and fancy groceries.

—Col. J. W. Guest sold on Tuesday to Gen. W. H. Jackson, of the Belle-Meade farm, near Nashville, the fine thoroughbred mare "Regards," by Imp. Australian, dam Annhandy by Imp. Yorkshire. Price $500. Regards is 16 years old. Smith Gentry on Wednesday bought of Richard Givens 40 good fat mules 15½ hands high at $136. Evans & Farris sold on Wednesday to T. E. Wood 60 good yearling calves at $35 per head. Rue & Minor sold to McVindig, of Atlanta, Ga., a fine brown saddle horse for $400.

—A negro named James Robinson and a white person named John Webb have been in town for several weeks. The negro loitered about one of the livery stables and attracted no particular attention. Webb made his headquarters at the Clemens House and by the knowing ones was pointed out as a detective working up a case against counterfeiters. Your correspondent learned that when it was suggested to him that he might be in the employ of the town government for the purpose of finding out who sold WHISKY, he scouted the idea of engaging in such employment. But time passed on until Wednesday evening, when T. P. Young, the Police Judge, on the affidavit of Robinson and Webb, issued 79 warrants, or summonses, against various citizens of the town, charging them with retailing liquor without license. The warrants were distributed as follows: Against A. S. McGorty 5 cases; Sam Warren 4; H. E. Samuel 2; F. W. Samuel 1; Henry Evans 7 cases; Henry Smith 1; George Boddow 5; Charles Russell 2; Gib Doran 12; Dennis Doran 1; Bart Williams 6; Louis Faulconer 12; George Ann Meux 6. Messrs Evans, Warren, McGorty and Samuel are druggists and F. W. Samuel is the son of H. E. Samuel, one of them. The balance, with the exception of George Boddow and Charles Russell, are colored persons. Some of the cases were set for trial Thursday, but none of them had been concluded when this report closed. It is not claimed that the druggists kept dram-shops, but that they sold wines and liquors to their customers as they sold any other article they kept in stock. The Trustees claim they have no right to do without license, although the druggists have kept liquors in stock and sold them without question for the last hundred years. It should also be stated that the Trustees have power at any time to grant license to sell liquors, but that they have persistently refused to do so, except in one case, that of Mr. B. F. Phillips, who has a large establishment in the Clemens House building. It should further be stated that the druggists claim the right to sell liquor with no greater restraint than they sell other goods that belong to their line of business; and that they do not recognize the right of the town authorities to institute these prosecutions.

Dr. T. B. Montgomery. The Directors of the First National Bank, of Stanford, at a meeting held in their banking office on Dec. 12th, unanimously adopted the following resolutions: Whereas Dr. T. B. Montgomery one of the directors of this bank, departed this life on Dec. 7th, 1883, therefore, be it resolved: 1. That this board has lost one of its most faithful and conservative members; the institution a prudent and wise counselor, and ourselves an agreeable and sincere friend. 2. He was a man of great integrity and unblemished character, and by death his family has been deprived of a devoted father and husband and the county of one of its oldest, most useful and respected citizens.

3. We extend to his family our sympathy for the great loss they have sustained. 4. And as a permanent mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, these resolutions will be spread upon the Secretary's book, and printed in the INTERIOR JOURNAL, and a copy delivered to his family. J. S. HOCKER, Pres. JOHN J. McROBERTS, Secy.
